Residential Addition Sherman, Texas

This project was challenging for the many trees around which the design had to grow. Access to the second floor library was up a custom spiral stair made by local craftsmen. After the project was complete, one more design task emerged – a fence which screened the neighbor's unsightly side yard, but allowed views to a creek bed beyond. The resulting fence design is a playful pattern of pickets, where inclusion and exclusion of pickets on either side of the fence defines its opacity, and the shadow patterns thus cast.
